

I agree with the American Radio Relay League concerning Docket ET 03-104. Broad band over power line (BPL) has been rejected by other countries because of it's radio wave interfering properties. Noise created by power lines are already a nuisance to radio receivers and I suspect that the level of BPL signal required for operation under these conditions would make weak radio communications impossible.